“I came to Prince Michael of Kent Court when I was 17. The love of the job just got completely under my skin! Then, I was promoted to Shift Leader, which I enjoyed for many years.

“When you care for people, you don’t ever feel like you’re doing a day’s work. That’s a complete privilege.”

Nina Stephens, Deputy Home Manager at Prince Michael of Kent Court, in Watford.

A message from Mark LLOYD, MD

RMBI Care Co. has weathered the storm of the pandemic with resilience and now we are seeing a return to normality in our Homes.

Ensuring the safety and security of our residents and staff has been our top priority over the past two years. Our staff teams have gone the extra mile in providing excellent care, and the support of our residents, families and Associations of Friends has been tremendous. Perhaps, the greatest return to normality is being able to resume family visits to see their loved ones in our Homes. We look towards the future with optimism.

Major themes that have emerged quite rightly include a greater awareness around mental health and wellbeing. This edition of RMBI News features the clear benefits pet and animal therapy brings to many of our residents.

We look forward to finally opening our new care home in Berkshire in September 2022, which represents the first new build for our charity in over a decade. The new Home will be specifically tailored to meet the needs of up to 45 people with nursing and residential dementia care; it will offer an environment that has been carefully designed to support our residents' changing needs.

Our 17 care homes for older people remain flexible to offer both permanent care and short term respite stays. Debbie Hollands, our Resident Placements Manager, will be happy to offer guidance. You can contact her at dhollands@rmbi.org.uk.

Thank you to all our readers for your continued support for RMBI Care Co.

Mark LLOYD, Managing Director

News in brief

Sporty resident promotes women's fitness to celebrate Women's History Month

Pamela Brett is one of the most active residents at Prince Michael of Kent Court, in Watford. At age 90, keeping fit is just as important to her as ever before. To honour Women's History Month in March, Pam encouraged women to prioritise 'keeping fit' to support their mental and physical wellbeing. She reveals: "When I cycle, I often play a YouTube video, which takes me along scenic views of the Cotswolds. It really helps with motivation!"

World famous magician and resident celebrates 100th birthday

Mark Raffles, a resident at Queen Elizabeth Court, in Llandudno, celebrated his 100th birthday. As a magician, Mark became a regular on our TV screens during the 60s, 70s and 80s, appearing on popular variety shows with his famous pickpocket act under the stage name of Ray St Clair. Mark is both a past President of The International Brotherhood of Magicians and a life member and past President of the Blackpool Magicians Club. He is also a Life Member of the Invisible Lodge in the U.S.A.

Harry Priestley House residents celebrate British Pie Week

As a nation, it is estimated we each eat around 36 pies a year on average. Most of us can't resist a homemade pie and, to mark British Pie Week from 7-13 March, residents at Harry Priestley House, in Doncaster, made their favourite pie recipes. Staff members at the care home organised a baking session, where some of the residents shared their favourite recipes and made mince and onion pies, cheese and onion pies, and apple pies for those who fancied a sweet treat.

Feathered friends visit Cadogan Court

Residents at Cadogan Court, in Exeter, were visited by Echo, the European Eagle owl; Chestnut, the Tawny owl; and Barley, the Barn owl. Kyler Rogers, Activities Coordinator, said: "We wanted to do something new and fun for our residents, so we invited these beautiful creatures to our Home." One resident who was especially delighted was Paula Anderson. She said: "It was a lovely visit as we got to hold and stroke these beautiful birds. They certainly put a smile on everyone's faces!"

The huge pawtential of pet therapy

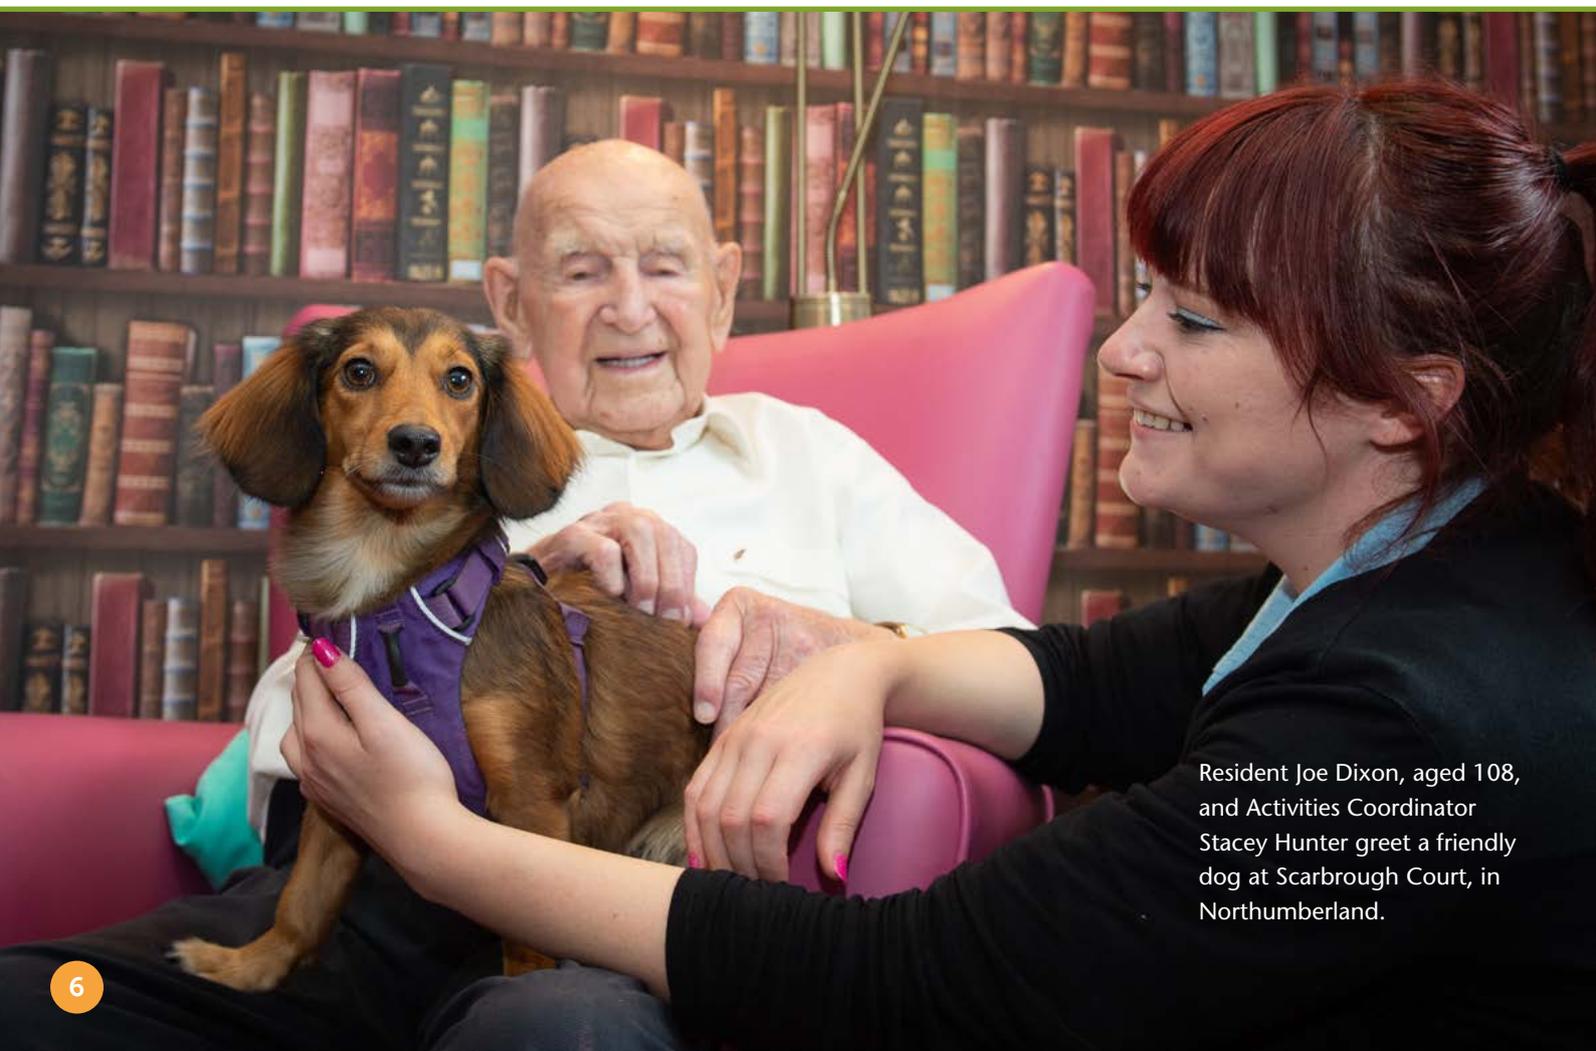

Our Homes welcome animals for therapeutic purposes. Pets bring joy and a sense of calm to our residents while benefitting their mental health and wellbeing.

Research has found that petting an animal promotes the release of serotonin, prolactin and oxytocin, all hormones that can play a part in elevating moods. According to Dr Christine Rhodes, lecturer in Health and Social Care at the University of Derby, interaction with pets is associated with decreased depression and increased socialisation. Following a pet therapy session she conducted with university staff in 2018, attendees used words such as “healing”, “soul-soothing” and “blissful” to describe their experience with two terrier dogs. Similarly, our staff teams in RMBI Care Co. Homes have observed similar benefits on our residents.

“Therapy pets give them companionship. Some of our residents have lived with animals all their lives, so the comfort and happiness these animals bring them is something special,” says Stacey Hunter, Activities Coordinator at Scarbrough Court, in Northumberland. “Our Home has had many animals through the doors,” says Stacey Hunter, “from dogs and cats to reptiles, spiders and foxes. The most popular were the miniature horses.” ■

Benefits of animal therapy*

For physical health

- Relax more during exercise.
- Diminishes overall physical pain.
- Breathing slows in those who are anxious.
- Lowers blood pressure and improves cardiovascular health.

For mental health

- Reduces loneliness.
- Increases mental stimulation.
- Can provide an escape or happy distraction.
- Lowers anxiety and helps people relax.

Friendly alpacas bring joy to residents

Residents at Lord Harris Court, in Berkshire, enjoyed a friendly visit from Truffle and George, two alpacas that soon became very popular in the care home.

The residents were delighted to meet the affectionate animals, who were happy to be petted and stroked. Antonia Brown, the Home's Trainer, led the alpacas around and introduced them to the residents. Taking part in this activity, 91 year old resident Edna Staines said: "They are so nice and well behaved. One of them ate out of my hand!"

Deane Robinson, Activities Coordinator at Lord Harris Court, said: "One of our residents was so delighted that she cried with joy! Everyone who met the animals, both residents and staff, fell in love with them."

The Activities Coordinator reflected on the importance of this activity for residents. She said: "The residents were able to get very close and feel the alpacas' breath and touch their shaggy hair. This was a particularly joyful experience for residents with visual problems."

The Home welcomes animals for therapeutic purposes, as they not only bring joy and a sense of calm to the residents, but also benefit their health by boosting their activity levels, reducing stress and combating loneliness. This activity was arranged in collaboration with Mortimer Alpacas, a local business in Berkshire that owns alpacas for people to enjoy outdoors. ■

Residents and staff celebrate Dog Show

Residents and staff at Albert Edward Prince of Wales Court, in Porthcawl, joined forces to launch their first Dog Show at the Home.

The staff brought in their pets, who competed in a range of different categories, including fastest retriever, temptation alley, egg and spoon, and musical hoops. The winners and all participants received rosettes and certificates at the end.

The Home's Dog Show judges were 85 year old resident Mollie Gould and 90 year old resident Dylis Waddington, with the support of Gillian Thatchell, member of Therapy Dogs Nationwide. Dylis Waddington, who always had dogs and keeps treats for any dogs that come to Albert Edward Prince of Wales Court, said: "It has been a marvellous experience. It was so lovely to see my friends, the dogs! I can't wait until the next time."

Mandy Kilpatrick, Activities Coordinator at the Home, agreed with Dylis and added: "The Dog Show has been a great success and we've been thrilled with everyone that took part in it, both dogs and their owners. Indeed it's been an amusing and fabulous afternoon, and the residents loved it!"

The staff at Albert Edward Prince of Wales Court are fully aware of the benefits that pets can provide to their residents. Activities Coordinator Mandy Kilpatrick said: "A lot of our residents at Albert Edward Prince of Wales Court had pets before moving in, and they have fond memories attached to dogs. It's also a good way of helping them to remember." ■

A helping paw

Below: A Canine Partners assistance dog helps a person with mobility difficulties to remove her shoes.

For people with a disability that might affect their sight, mobility, hearing and more, an assistance dog can be a lifeline – which is why there are thousands of them in the UK providing comfort, practical support and companionship to those who need it.

The Masonic Charitable Foundation (MCF, the Freemasons' charity) has given £30,000 to Sussex-based charity Canine Partners, which is transforming the lives of more than 200 people with disabilities over the age of 50 through their specially trained assistance dogs. Not only do these dogs make day-to-day life easier by helping with household jobs – they also provide a sense of security and friendship.

The grant is funding three months of assessment, training and after care, so that older people with disabilities can form a partnership with a dog that is perfectly tailored to meet their needs.

During the pandemic, social distancing meant delivery drivers, who could normally help those with limited mobility by carrying in their shopping, could no longer provide this type of support. For one lady, her Canine Partners assistance dog was retrained to fetch a washing basket, put the shopping bags in and push it into the kitchen where she could unpack.

Amazingly, the dogs are also trained to offer support in emergency situations; if a client falls from a wheelchair, the dog can operate the emergency alarm, open the door to allow a third party to enter, as well as provide blankets, pillows and a mobile phone.

Whilst the dogs' practical assistance is a lifeline for many, the company of a canine friend can be incredibly rewarding, whilst the additional responsibility of looking after their new pal allows a person to form a daily routine and exercise regularly. ■

Transforming our Homes to support people living with dementia

RMBI Care Co. has invested £250,000 to transform Prince George Duke of Kent Court to enhance the environment for people living with dementia.

The care home in Chislehurst, which currently supports up to 73 residents, refurbished part of its first floor to create a 'house model' dementia environment. The new area can support 19 residents with dementia. It has an open lounge and a dining room, creating a central point for residents to go to for socialising, relaxing, or to enjoy different activities.

By working closely with the residents and understanding their interests, other spaces created to support them include a country kitchen, sensory zone and technology zone. An 'outside inside' area has also been designed to bring the 'outdoors indoors', from the wall décor to the furniture and by introducing animals.

RMBI Care Co. has also invested £500,000 to increase the number of people with dementia that Queen Elizabeth Court can support, from seven to 19. The care home in Llandudno, North Wales, now has four new distinct 'Houses', each having a 'home from home' feeling, which is vital for the wellbeing of residents with dementia. ■
